

Greek students get inside look at shipbroking

30 Nov 2016 OPINION

by Helen Kelly @HelenKelly_LL helen.kelly@informa.com

Real Time Graduates to hold first Open House with Hellenic Shipbrokers Association

GREEK students are being offered the opportunity to get an inside look at the world of shipbroking.

Real Time Graduates, the not-for-profit graduate placement scheme set up by Suzanna Laskaridis, is hosting its first Open House at the Hellenic Shipbrokers Association headquarters in Athens on Thursday, December

Two panels of expert industry insiders from the Greek shipping community will be on hand to answer students' questions about what it takes to become a shipbroker.

In attendance will be representatives from classification societies and shipmanagement companies. Students are encouraged to ask as many questions as possible.

"In Real Time Graduates, we strongly believe that the most important asset that a graduate can acquire after the end of her or his academic course is to experience in real time the environment of a shipping company," Ms Laskaridis said.

"We have all experienced the phenomenon of young graduates finishing their studies and not being familiar with how a shipping company works, its departments and even where they could start working. That is why we believe it is crucial to open the doors of our companies, welcome young graduates and talk to them about our day to day operations."

Students can register to attend here.